Talking About Past Events with Time Periods and Points of Time -

FOR AND SINCE

Page 96

We use “for” to measure a period of time up to the present; we use the present perfect tense and not the present tense.

For example, “I have been here for 6 months”, “I have known her for a long time”, etc.

We use “since” to give the starting point of actions, events or states. It refers to when things began.

For example, “I have been here since June”, “It has been 6 years since I last saw him”, etc.

VOCABULARY

Listen and repeat the words and sentences.

Page 145

Please refer to the definition file.

Describing States and Events –
LOOK, SEEM, APPEAR + ADJECTIVE

The words 'look, seem and appear' can be used not only as main verbs but also as linking verbs.

We use those words to express something that we think is true although we are not 100% sure is true.

Examples: "The girl seems sad", "The girl looks sad", "The girl appears sad", etc.

'Look, seem and appear' are used to express something that can be seen.

However, 'seem' can also be used to express something that is not seen but we think is true in another way.

Examples: through conversation, emotion, etc.

The structure to use for these words are:

subject + look + adjective

subject + seem + adjective or subject + seem + to be/have + adjective subject + appear + adjective or subject + appear + to be/have + adjective
