➤ Making an opening statement

Read the following and answer the question.

An opening statement would normally be made by the company who requested the meeting, or if one company acts as hosts for the meeting, the top ranking member of that team should make the opening statement, which is the most common case. It might be made, however, by each side, or jointly done by two high level executives (one from each side), which might go something like this: "We expect you to come to an agreement because our companies put a high value on doing business together. We know you can do it."

Let's focus on the most common case. What do you think an opening statement should include? And suggest phrases for each of the items included.

➤ Giving an opening proposal

Read the following aloud.

If you start with good first impressions in a negotiation, it will affect the whole process, from the first proposal to the final agreement. These opening stages, especially between different cultures, are very important. The opening proposal should emphasize mutual benefits, be positive and create interest.

➤ How to handle common rejections to first proposals.

What would you do if they said

1. "Your offer is too expensive."
2. "We don't have that kind of budget."
3. "That's not what we are looking for."
4. "Your offer is not competitive."

Match the rejections (1 – 4) with the possible way to handle (a – d).

- a. Suggest that the payment be deferred to meet the size of the budget.
- b. Keep getting information about what they are looking for until you understand their needs and reschedule your offer accordingly.
- c. Before you lower your price, check what price they are looking for.
- d. Focusing on strong features of your products, as well as asking what the phrase 'not being competitive' means will be the best things to do.
