Talking about future events 2

To be going to

We use 'to be going to' to talk about what we want to do in the future. This is used when you already make a decision before speaking. For example, "I'm not going to eat my lunch because I'm not hungry."

We also use 'to be going to' when we are sure that something is going to happen because we see it now or it's happening now. For example: "I think it's going to rain. The sky is really dark."

We use be going to to talk about future plans and intentions or refers to a specific time in the future. It expresses that something is a plan and that a person intends to do something in the future. We also use be going to to predict something that we think is certain to happen or which we have evidence for now. When we predict, we guess about what might happen in the future.

This is how to form it:

Subject + to be going to + verb

Examples:

I am going to swim

You are going to eat

John and Emma are going to talk
